

Hôtel Joyce 7/10

Architect Philippe Maidenbergh has been gradually making his mark on Paris hotels, combining all you need in the way of air conditioning and i-pod docks with quirky details. The reception desk is made of stacked-up Eiffel Towers and fibre optics sparkle in the parquet. The 44 rooms wittily rework Haussmannian style so that they are contemporary yet distinctly Parisian. Buffet breakfast served in the lovely glazed conservatory/lounge; much of the produce is organic. The hotel is not licensed but you can help yourself to free coffee, tea and soft drinks all day.

Price: from £95, including breakfast

Address: 29 rue La Bruyère, 75009

Read Natasha Edwards's full review here

Hotel Joyce